

State-of-the-Art Managed Services

LBi offers its clients end-to-end digital service, which includes design, hosting, maintenance and support. In Interxion they found a perfect partner to support their ambitions.

The Challenge

With a growing client list which includes brands like Barclays Bank, Bauer Consumer Media, Centrica, Corus, Formula1.com, Mazda and Red Bull Racing, LBi needed to expand its London data centre capacity. The agency also needed high-density power to support server virtualisation, a technology refresh that requires the latest power-hungry blade servers.

“Our managed services division is a growing and profitable area, and we urgently needed not only more space but space of the right sort,” said John Russell, Managed Services Partner, LBi. “Our existing London data centre provider was not only full but was also unable to satisfy our growing need for high-density power deployments.”

The Solution

Following a thorough review of the market, LBi selected Interxion to provide the equipment housing and connectivity to drive their managed services operations forward.

With a 13 MVA redundant grid supply, Interxion’s City of London facility supports high-density power configurations as standard. This enabled LBi to deploy blade server technology and to roll out a new redundant and energy-efficient VMware infrastructure. As a member of Interxion London’s customer community, LBi was also able to access up to 28 carriers and ISPs under one roof, including the London Internet Exchange (LINX).

“Because of their carrier-neutrality, Interxion can offer access to an impressive list of network providers, which will help us keep our customers’ options open and minimize IP transit costs,” said John Russell. “We host a lot of high-profile multimedia sites that devour bandwidth, such as FHM and Formula 1, so we were already members of LINX. Having a ready-made LINX PoP in the data centre allows our customers to continue to connect directly to the heart of the Internet.”

“By a stroke of good fortune, not only were Interxion ideally equipped to provide us with world-class infrastructure, but they were also right next door to our offices. When you come across facilities of this calibre on your doorstep, you know that the partnership is destined to succeed.”
